CIRCLE OF SUPPORT (FRIENDS)

First Circle: Circle of INTIMACY

Second Circle: Circle of FRIENDSHIP

Third Circle: Circle of PARTICIPATION

Fourth Circle: Circle of EXCHANGE

Fill Circles from the Outside-In!

This exercise is a social scan. It will give a quick picture of who is in your life. It is very useful to gain clarity about who might be involved in certain activities, or circles that need to be filled. We recommend it personally and consider it an essential preventive health check for students, teachers and citizens. The hidden key question is: "Who loves this person?"

Instructions:

- Draw four concentric circles.
- Put yourself in the middle then take a few minutes to fill in the people in each of your four circles.
 - FIRST Circle: The Circle of INTIMACY
 List the people most intimate in your life those you cannot imagine living without.
 - SECOND Circle: The Circle of FRIENDSHIP

 List good friends those who almost made the first circle.
 - THIRD Circle: The Circle of PARTICIPATION

 List people, organizations, networks you are involved with (work colleagues, the choir, the square dance club, your soft ball team, etc. people/groups you participate in.

 - FOURTH Circle: The Circle of EXCHANGE
 List people you PAY to provide services in your life. (medical professionals, tax accountants, mechanics, hair dressers, barbers, teachers, etc.)

Note: People can be in more than one circle. Example: your doctor or teacher could also be a very close friend; a deceased parent/friend or even a pet, might be an intimate personal supporter, etc.

TOOL: THE RELATIONSHIP MAP

A relationship map identifies important people, friends, and allies who can contribute to a capacity description and perhaps plan together with the focus person over time. We also find many immediate opportunities for building and strengthening relationships.

Construct this map by placing the focus person in the center, and listing important relationships in at least three clusters:

1) family, 2) friends and community members, and 3) paid service providers. Indicate intensity and depth of relationships by putting the most important people close to the center of the map, near the focus person. You can also indicate intensity by using thick lines pointing to key people. Others who are less involved can be drawn further from the center with thinner or dotted lines indicating connection. Consult appendix page 68 for a closer look at a relationship map.

Remember that the purpose of this exercise is to get to know the person, to look for clues to potential relationship building activities, and to make decisions about how to proceed with the planning process. Once you complete this map with the person, work together to generate five ways to deepen and strengthen these relationships. The following section indicates some common discoveries from relationship mapping.

RELATIONSHIP MAP

Purpose: To identify personal support, the most important people in the focus person's life, and people who may be interested in planning together over time.

Example: Tom's Relationships

Facilitation Tips:

- 1. Divide the circle into at least three categories: family, friends, and paid staff members.
- Put each person on the map with a symbol of a person and their name. Indicate the nature of the relationship and how long they have known each other.
- 3. Put the people who are closest to the person, who are most important toward the center of the circle. Indicate intensity and strength of the relationship with heavier lines.
- 4. Highlight in yellow people who might be involved in the support circle.

Identify the people you want to guide you

Path is a facilitated process that uses a graphic record to focus energy and to support memory. It calls for two people to act as as team guides: a process facilitator and a graphic recorder.

- A process facilitator, who looks after time and pace while assisting the pathlinder through the steps and questions.
 The process facilitator attends to the process as revealed through words, voice, and eyes.
- A graphic recorder, who captures the pathfinder's words and images on paper and offers the pathfinder occasional summaries of the work and helps the pathfinder identify emergent themes that unify the ongoing process. The graphic recorder focuses on imagery, using their ears and hands to highlight their listening and intuition.

In our experience, a team of outsiders provide the most effective guidance for Path. We have seen good, often surprising, results among people who are trying out the guide roles for the first time. It would be extraordinary for someone from within a group to guide as well as an outsider and most uncommon for one person to be both process facilitator and recorder.

It is absolutely necessary that the guides themselves experience being a pathfinder. There is no substitute for personal experience in discovering the texture of feelings and the pace of the questions without trying the process oneself.

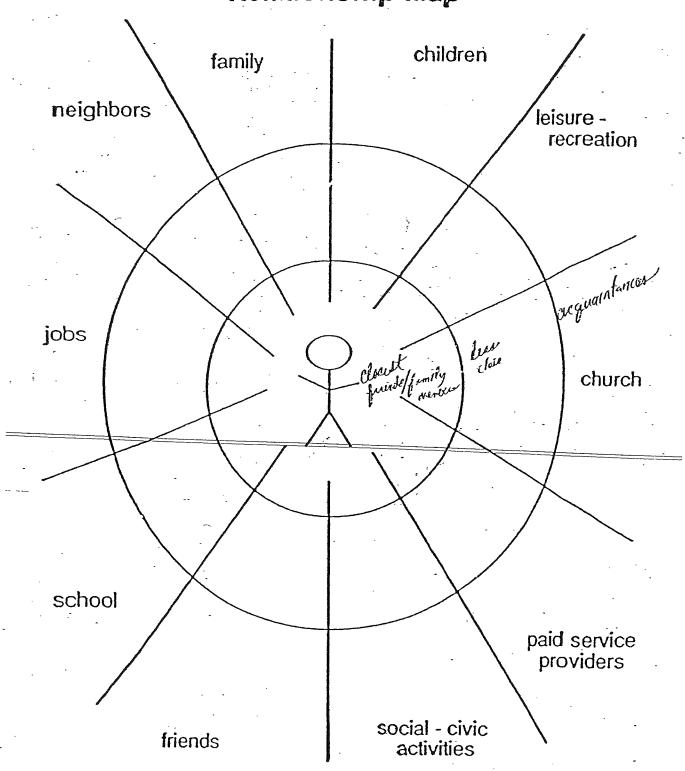

Because the situations pathfinders face generate high emotion, pathfinders need to chose guides they can trust to deal constructively with people's and group's feelings of pain, fear, and anger. Expression of such feelings is not the goal of Path, as it is in some kinds of group work, but the feelings are real in the situation and guides need the skill and willingness to encourage pathfinders to face them and learn from them rather than fleeing them.

Invite people to join in Path is a social process. Even when focused on an Intensely personal issue for an individual, the process is immeasurably enriched by the active involvement of others who know and care about the person.

PREPARATION FOR PLANNING

"Until now, we planned with program people.

Information about My Life allowed us to prepare with family as well as with a respite provider who could not come to the meeting.

We learned this person really likes to watch bowling pins fall and golf balls being hit. This is giving us new ideas for exploring day activities and possible jobs."

-Vocational Coordinator

Identifying Who Will Help Plan

The person whose plan is being developed identifies with whom they would like to plan. Key people they include may also be asked for ideas of others who would be particularly helpful in planning, and the person may decide to include these people as well. To develop a plan that addresses the person's whole life, participants will ideally be representative of that life rather than only representative of the programs which serve him or her. People with strong past connections, such as school teachers, should also be considered. If the person is unable to identify participants, family and/or significant others can assist with this.

THE PERSONAL PROFILE: BASIC FRAMEWORKS FOR GETTING TO KNOW THE FOCUS PERSON

Relationship Map: Identifies opportunities for personal support and assistance.

Helps to illustrate the most important people in the focus person's life. People interested in planning together over time, and opportunities for building relationships.

Places Map:

Describes the pattern of current daily life.

Helps to illustrate how the focus person spends her time. How much time is spent in segregated or community settings, and existing opportunities for building community.

Background Map: Provides an overview of the life experience of the person and family.

Helps to illustrate positive experiences form the past to build on. Appreciation of the traumas. loss, and grief in life. Celebration of accomplishments, and opportunities now as a result of the past.

Preferences Map:

Describes personal preferences, gifts and interests, as well as conditions to avoid.

Helps to illustrate patterns in the gifts, potential, and unique contributions of the person.

Describes patterns in conditions that challenge development.

Dreams Map: Hopes and Fears

Describes ideas about personal dreams and desires for the future.

Describes how people feel about the opportunities and obstacles they see to making things happen.

Helps to understand inner images about desires, and both the hopes and fears about the future through the eyes of the focus person.

OPTIONAL MAPS TO USE IN THE PERSONAL PROFILE PROCESS

Choices Map:

Describes decisions made by the person and decisions made by other people.

Helps to illustrate the degree of control the focus person has over life decisions, and the degree to which decisions are made by other people. Helps clarify the need for personal assistance.

Health Map:

Describes the conditions that promote or threaten the health of the person.

Helps to illustrate real limitations and constraints imposed by health concerns, medications, therapies, and other conditions and routines that assure or threaten good health.

Respect Map:

Describes personal characteristics that can create barriers to community acceptance as well as remembering qualities that will be a contribution in relationship life.

Helps to illustrate the personal characteristics, behaviors and social roles that may lead to rejection by others as well as positive qualities that can be strengthened in personal relationships.

Other Optional Maps:

Other maps can be invented by the facilitator to help them understand life as it is experienced through the eyes of the focus person. For example, it is important to understand methods and channels of communication for people who live with visual and auditory impairments. In this section, we will outline some optional maps that focus on communication.

What are some great things about you? What do you like about you? What are some things you're good at? proud of? What are some nice things that people say about you? What do people thank you for? Purpose: To explore inner images about desires and dreams for the future. It helps to illustrate the experiences the person or the family wants to have more of, including dreams for a home, a job, community life, and personal life. The difference between this map and the "vision" map developed during the Futures Planning meeting is that this map expresses the images and hopes of the person and those who know them best. A NEW format for Recording your MAP

After many years of doing MAPS, and experimenting with many formats for recording a MAP, this is our collective best outline - for now. One of the advantages of this format is that you can use a yellow (light) marker to make the outline in advance (if you choose) - and then you have a template to guide your recording. This is yet another stage in the evolution of MAPS. If you discover a new, better or different recording format, please let us know.

All My Life's A Circle

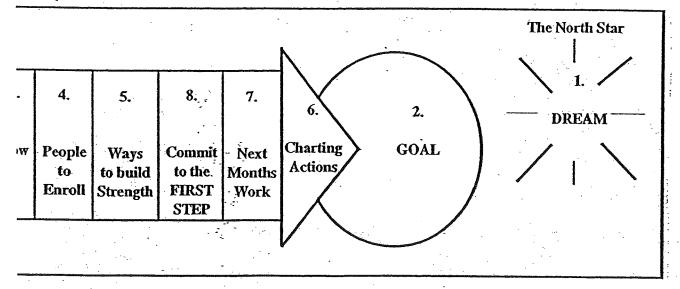

Step 1 - The North Star - the Dream

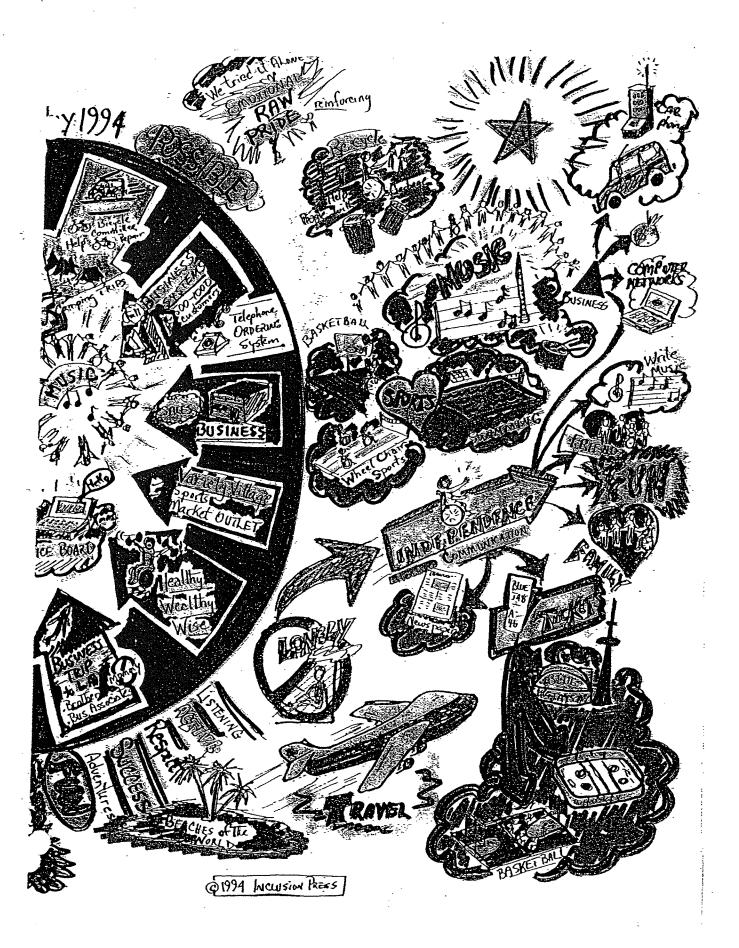

The time is spent focusing on the individual identifying his or her DREAMS and ultimately their North Star. Some of the questions that can assist a person identify their North Star may be:

- What ideals do you most want to realize?
- What values do you want to guide you?
- What gives direction to your life?
- What drives you?

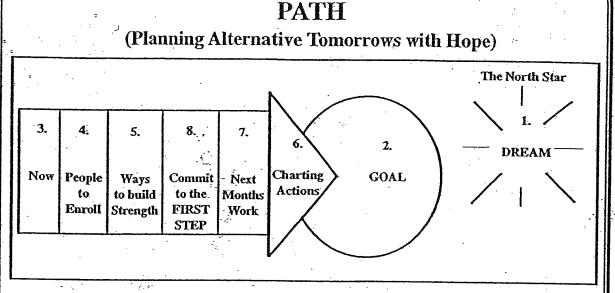

Barry's North Star was: to be able to live in a home with just a few people, he wanted support so that he could eat when he wanted to, go to the bathroom when he wanted to, have a bath when he wanted one, and leave the house when he wanted to. The facilitator finished this step by summarizing the dream and solicited from Barry his perspective on the accuracy of the information that had been graphically depicted.

3. Barriers: Things that make it hard to reach my goals / dreams Health and safety must be addressed.

Has a seizure disorder. She is taking medication for her seizures. Wears a helmet on hard surfaces, outside her home and where she knows she can injure herself. She needs to have awake staff while she sleep. Can sometimes tell when a seizure is coming on, and she will sit down so she does not injure herself.

Needs to be monitored while she is in the bathroom

Requires a lot of sleep. She needs to have a nap after work. If she does not get enough sleep, she can become very agitated with can increase her chance of having a seizure. Needs to slowly transition when she first gets up.

Might have cluster seizures before or after her menstrual cycle. Is taking medication for the discomfort and headaches.

Needst to be encouraged to drink fluids. She does not sweat and has atendency not to drink a lot.

Takes medication for agitation.

Rarely gets sick.

Stays with the group on outings and stays away from the road. However, she does become distracted in parking lots and may move toward her vehicle without looking for oncoming traffic.

Is very outgoing and friendly and could be vulnerable in the community if she did not have someone with her.

3. Concerns about my health and safety: (*other than those listed previously)

THE KIND OF HELP I NEED FOR MY HEALTH AND SAFETY IS:

Assistance with scheduling and attending appointments.

Assistance with medications.

Monitoring around the clock due to the frequency and intensity of seizures.

Medication helps, but the seizures are not under complete control.

Recommendations/ Referrals:

- 1) Continue with Support Coordination Services
- 2) Continue habilitation on CMH mobile crew.
- 3) Continue to receive financial support to maintain housing.
- 4) Continue to receive staff support to maintain safety, health and quality of life in supported living setting.
- 5) Community participation such as: bowling, classes, outings, having friends over and enjoying day outings. Attending church regularly is suggested.
- 6) Maintain contact with friends from Our Lady of Providence.
- 7) Maintain nursing services and regular monitoring as required.
- 8) Maintain psychology services for assessment, devising behavior plan and monitoring activity.
- 9) Dietician services available if needed
- 10) Excellent communication required between all members of support system to ensure the highest quality of life.

Opportunities / Dreams / Goals I'm not going to pursue right now and the reason:

The facilitator provided written information on CMH agency hearing Rights. It was agreed that the information will be used if needed.

How Can We Support Lucy?

Lucy said:

I need some help from someone in finding and learning a job

When I live on my own I need help with cooking

I will also need help getting groceries home

I need help with my medications

Others said.

Someone could help Lucy find a job working around animals

Mom could put marks on oven dial, so that Lucy can start using the oven

Lucy could help put together a book of her favorite recipes using picture symbols

Lucy might need help for a while in changing sheets, getting used to public transit, getting to the doctor's office for her appointment, doing her laundry, and keeping her place clean

Make sure we help Lucy look for a place to live near a grocery store

Dad can get a small cart with a basket for Lucy to use to haul groceries from the store while she is living a home

Lucy's sister will make sure they have some fun time every week.

PCP DECISION-MAKING PROCESS FOR DIFFICULT SITUATIONS

UTILIZING THE WHOLE PCP TEAM, INCLUDING THE CONSUMER:

1. Establish the basics:

Who is on this consumer's PCP team? Other important people. Agree on the meeting format and decision making process. The consumer's dreams / wishes and aspirations for himself? Dreams / wishes of others for him? Strengths, positive characteristics, skills & abilities?

- 2. Determine what is important TO the consumer, and what is important FOR the consumer. What is important TO a person includes only what they themselves are "saying" with
 - 1) Their words, and
 - 2) Their behavior.

When words and behavior don't match, the bias is to rely on behavior.

What is important FOR people includes only those things that we need to keep in mind regarding

1) Issues of health or safety

- 2) What others see as important to help the person be a valued member of the community.
- 3. Identify what you know about the situation and what you need to find out.

 If you need more information, determine if you can go on at this point or whether you should reschedule the meeting.

Determining what is working and not working for the individual and for those who support him could be useful. Utilize all sources of information, including people who may not be present.

- 4. If there is a dilemma about what and how much the paid services should do, determine the core responsibilities and what needs to be addressed with creativity and courage.
- 5. Brainstorm ideas, including the outlandish and impractical, about what could be done.

 All members of the team toss out ideas of what could be done. Keep it lively!

 All ideas should be recorded on a big sheet so that everyone can see them.

 DO NOT DISCUSS OR EDIT THESE IDEAS!
- 6. Review, evaluate, combine and extend the ideas until you have a possible approach to the situation.

 Use contrasting pens to link related ideas, zing the bad ones, highlight and expand good ones.

 Don't eliminate an idea just because you don't know who or how it could be implemented.

 Brainstorm again, on knotty possibilities.

7. Try to anticipate what will happen if this approach is put into action. If the consequences of the plan are unacceptable then go to #8. If the anticipated outcome is positive, move to #9.

List what your fears are, including agency and community ones.

List what you might try.

List the most likely outcome of the ideas you've chosen.

Decide whether the idea is worth whatever risk might develop.

Try to anticipate reduction-of-risk measures.

- 8. Revise your ideas, by repeating the brainstorming process if necessary, and develop another approach.
- 9. Go back and check the plan against the requirements of what is important TO and FOR the individual.
- 10. Assign responsibility based on do-ability and commitment, utilizing the consumer, generic and natural supports before paid supports.

Identify each PCP team member's role, and the specific ways in which they support the individual.

Consider supports in this order:

- 1) the individual him/herself
- 2) family / friends
- 3) general community resources with or without accommodation (ADA)
- 4) other services for which he/she is eligible
- 5) CMH paid supports
- 11. Determine the review period to evaluate the effectiveness of the outcome and consumer satisfaction.
- 12. Repeat the problem solving process as often as necessary to move toward effectiveness of and satisfaction with the plan.

NOTES: There are a lot of parts to working out a difficult issue. Occasionally the discussion will become contentious and the facilitator can redirect the team to the process that they have agreed to use to address the problem. Refocusing and restating the purpose of the meeting may help reduce animosity and lead toward more cooperative discussion. It is always work, for everybody. The focus person should be as much a participant as possible, and decisions made in his absence should be with his advanced agreement.

Listen to Me Communicate

This part of the workbook is designed to support people who do not use words to talk, or who have difficulty in communicating with words. This section is also useful for people who do use words to talk but are difficult to understand and as a way of recording how we communicate with people who have difficulty in understanding what we say.

The heading what is happening describes the circumstances that seem to affect what the person does. For example, it could be the place, the people around, or the activity that affect someone's behavior. The headings and (person's name) does describes what the person does in terms that are clear to a reader who has not seen it and would still recognize it. For people where it is something hard to describe (e.g., a facial expression), a picture or even a video recording may be preferred. The heading we think it means describes the meaning that people think is present. It is not uncommon for there to be more than one meaning for a single behavior. Where this is the case, all of the meanings should be listed. The heading and we should describes what those who provide support are to do in response to what the person is saying with their behavior. The responses under this heading give a careful reviewer a great deal of insight into how the person is perceived and supported.

Solution Circles

A Solution Circle is a straightforward and efficient tool that helps people to get "unstuck" from a problem in life or work.

Time: 30 Minutes

Roles. Problem presenter, Process Facilitator to keep the process on task and on time; Graphic Recorder, and 3-9 amazingly creative solution team members. The more diverse the team, the better, sometimes people who know nothing in particular about an issue have ideas that spark real creativity.

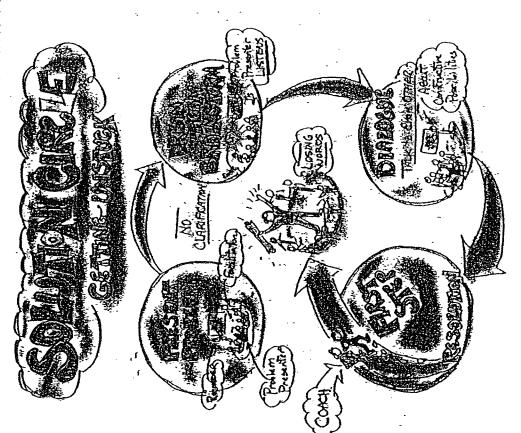

Step One: (@ minutes). 🔊 🔆

The Problem Presenter will have six uninterrupted minutes to outline the problem. The job of the Process Facilitator is to keep time and make sure no one interrupts. Get people in a tight circle so they can hear and see each other.

The recorder takes notes. The brainstorm team listens, if the Problem Presenter stops talking before the six minutes elapse, everyone else stays silent until the six minutes pass. The Problem Presenter gets six uninterrupted minutes. The Process Facilitator holds the silent space for the problem presenter.

Step Two: (6 minutes)

This is a brainstorm. Everyone chimes in with ideas about creative solutions to the problem that was just presented. It is not a time to clarify the problem or to ask questions. It is not a time to give speeches, lectures or advice. The Process Facilitator must make sure this is a brainstorm. Everyone gets a chance to give his or her brilliant ideas. No one can dominate. The Problem Presenter listens - without interrupting. He/she must not talk or respond. We often give the person masking tape to seal their lips (symbolically) and facilitate their listening. It's hard to just listeni

-

Step Three: (6 minutes)

Now the team holds a discussion with the Problem Presenter, This is the time to explore and clarify the problem. Focus on the positive points only and not on what cannot be done. The problem presenter leads off by identifying ideas that seem interesting, or different, or worth a try, or worth refining into possibilities for action.

Step Four: (6 minutes)

The Problem Presenter and the group decide on first steps that are possible within the next 3 days (and preferably within 24 hours). This is critical. Research shows that unless a first step is taken almost immediately, people do not get out of their ruts. The Problem Presenter chooses a coach from the group who volunteers to phone or see the person within the agreed time (1 to 3 days) and check if he/she took their first step. This creates a positive supportive pressure that helps people get into action.

Finally, the team does a round of words (each person uses one word to describe the experience) and the Recorder gives the completed record to the Problem Presenter. If the group is large, the teams return to the main group, debrief and continue.

Helpful Hints:

- · Obey the rules It works for you.
- The crisper the facilitation, the better the solution oircle.
- Don't let people 'danfy' between step one and two. In Step Three, focus on the positive doable items—not what has already failed.
- Insist that people listen.
- Use the time pressure to push through there is no time to waste:

Outcomes:

In our experience, people often find that this exercise generates action. It does not guarantee a solution, but often gets people unstuck at least pointing to a different way to look at the situation or to a next logical step.

People sometimes discover that by following the rules of the exercise and focusing on an issue with a small group, breakthroughs can occur quickly, it is possible to move through heavy constraints and be liberated to try new options.

Caution: The Solution Circle a great tool to use when you aren't sure where to begin, it is quick and can get people focused constructively. However, if you know the problem you are dealing with is complex you may choose to move directly to a MAP, PATH or other more comprehensive tool.

Marsha's Challenge:

Are you trying fast paced group problem-solving techniques?

If not, why not?

If you are worried about using Solution Circles yourself, who in your team will you ask to initiate them?

HEALTH MAP

Optional Map-Health Map: The purpose of the Health Map is to describe conditions that promote or threaten the health of the focus person. This is a good map to do when people have complex health, therapy, or medication issues that must be considered in the development of a plan.

Facilitation Tips

- Note the conditions and indicators of goodhealth in green, and the symptoms or problems of poor health in red.
- Note special physical care needs, needed equipment and health routines, and issues such as diet and exercise.

RESPECT MAP

Optional Map-Respect Map: The purpose of the Respect Map is to identify personal characteristics that create barriers to community acceptance, and that may lead to rejection by others, in contrast to the positive personal characteristics that help the focus person gain respect by others and develop relationships. This is a helpful map when people have complex characteristics and behaviors that challenge others.

Facilitation Tips:

- Record respected characteristics and roles in green. These are qualities and characteristics that other people admire, value, and appreciate.
- Record the odd or unusual behaviors that can lead to rejection or alienation by typical community members.
- Clarify the frequency and context in which these behaviors occur.

PLANNING FOR RISK A SAFETY NETS PLANNING TOOL

DEVELOPED BY THE MARYLAND SELF DETERMINATION INITIATIVE

Permission to include this tool was granted by The Maryland Self Determination Initiative.

USE OF SUPPLEMENTAL TOOLS

A variety of supplemental tools are included with Thriving in My Community: A Plan for Independence, Support, and Belonging. The core plan is intended to be used with the supplemental tools that reflect the person's situation and needs. The supplemental tools may be used as presented or adapted. The key is to assure that pertinent information is addressed in the planning process.

PLANNING FOR RISK: A Safety Nets Planning Tool Developed by The Maryland Self Determination Initiative (Appendix II Pages 1-5)

To develop a safety net, it is necessary to think through emergency back up plans related to significant health or safety issues and arrange for them to be in place before a new situation begins. This tool offers a guideline for assessing individual health and safety risk factors and planning safety nets in response to such factors. It addresses health care, emergencies, competencies, environment, financial, communication, life cycle changes, amount of support hours needed, and training of paid support.

For a person who desires increased independence in their living situation, it is useful for someone who knows the person well to review the guidelines with him or her and identify areas where support will be needed. This may happen prior to the planning meeting so that information is available when planning. Or it may be an activity included as part of the plan, provided a mechanism is in place to assure the necessary supports are addressed before the new support situation begins.

This tool is included with permission from the Maryland Self Determination Initiative. Several of its authors participated in the development of Thriving in My. Community.

PLANNING FOR RISK

A Safety Nets Planning Tool Developed By The Maryland Self Determination Initiative

- In order to protect people's health, safety, and consequently freedom, it is necessary to identify health and safety risk factors and create supports (and back-up plans) to minimize risk.
- 2. It is important to develop trust. Risk should be addressed not by limiting freedom or automatically suggesting the person stop an activity, but by helping the person look at ways to be safe within the choices they have made. A person may chose to take a risk without safeguards. If the risk does not overly jeopardize the person's health or safety, the person's choice should be honored.
- 3. Situations which present a high level of risk and serious consequences for health or safety should not be supported if adequate safety nets cannot be identified. Groups of people planning with the person need to figure those situations out. Continued work should happen to at some point sufficiently reduce risk so the person can proceed. (There is an obligation to use state funds for support in a way that does not promote harm to the person.)

GUIDELINE FOR ASSESSING RISK AND PLANNING SAFETY NETS

For each of the following

- 1. Can the person do this on their own or do they need support? If they need
- support, do they want to learn to be more independent in this area?
- 3. Specify who will support for each thing (family, neighbors, friends, paid support, etc.)
- 4. What accommodations or adaptations can be made to minimize risk? Consider strategies or items to support as well as people.
- 5. Be sure all necessary people have a listing of safety nets planned.

HEALTH CARE

- Can the person give medical consent (if not, who?)
- Can the person take medication on their own?
 - if not self-medicating, who is available to help (neighbor, family, etc.)?
 - how is it monitored to assure person receives medication?
 - log at home reviewed weekly by a person in monitoring role
 - if a serious problem, should there be closer monitoring, e.g. a phone call confirmation to designated person?
- Can the person arrange medical care?
 - can the person explain medical needs to involved support and health care providers?
 - who will make medical appointments and arrange transportation?
 - who will provide information to the physician about medication prescribed?

- who will keep a list of all physicians that are seen and their phone numbers'

- who will keep the insurance information and procedures?

- if unable to identify illness, will the person receive an annual exam to help identify issues? Will support people know how the person indicates illness?
- Can the person arrange to receive follow up care needed?

- including replacing old medications with current

- someone e.g. pharmacist to verify medications will not poorly interact arrange repairs e.g. wheelchair, obtain hearing aid batteries, etc.

 Does the person have knowledge of basic first aid and response to medical emergency?

Can the person plan their diet and nutrition needs?

- follow plan to address dietary needs

- consider lifestyle, opportunities and ways to support the person (e.g. if don't know how to cook or feel it is a hassle to prepare a nutritious meal for one, perhaps support staff can assist to cook and freeze individual portions for on weekends.)
- If medical or other technology is relied upon and it failed, would the person be safe.

Is there a backup? (e.g. telephone by a bed if hoyer lift is used)

- If a diabetic or similar health concern, does the person wear a medic-alert?
- Look at all medical issues, rate of clinician involvement for those things, and who will help for what to assure sufficient plan of support
- Do medical needs require that one designated person monitor all medical information?

EMERGENCIES

- Does the person know or always carry his/her address and telephone number?
- If something happens, who can the person call? who can the family call? (see attached list)
- Does the person also have telephone numbers of back up people?
- Does the person know those telephone numbers or carry them with them?
- Do involved community members have a number to call if they have a concern?
- (In the end, it is the friend in the community who may act on behalf of the person David Schwartz)
- Does the person carry necessary emergency information (name, emergency conperson, allergies, etc.) in the event of incapacitating accident
- Does he/she know how to access emergency medical/fire/police services (e.g. dial 911)?
- Does the person know how to respond in case of fire, crime, eviction notice?
- Does he/she know what to do in the event of a household systems failure (electric, plumbing, telephone, gas, heat, etc.)
- If a support person does not show up when they are scheduled, does the person know who to contact and their phone number?

COMPETENCIES

- · Observe skill ability, e.g. can person cook on a stove, cross street on his/her own
- What supports are needed by a person who is learning a new skill but does not have skill yet?
- Assessment of competencies by someone who knows person well (see sample.)
- Assess personal safety awareness and strategies, for example:
 - safe sex and prevention of sexually transmitted diseases
 - sexual vulnerability and exploitation
 - awareness of unsafe situations such as being out late in some places, etc.
- Is the person aware of the risk of door-to-door salesman and phone solicitors and how they can be talked out of money, etc.

ENVIRONMENT

- Is the person aware of locks on doors and windows and how they are used?
- Do they have keys and know where spare keys are located? Does someone else (family, staff, neighbor) have a spare key?
- Is there a security system in the home? Does the person know how to use it and who to call if it is set off?
- Are there grab rails in the bathroom if needed?
- Is there a non-skid bath mat in the bathtub?
- Is hot water set at a reasonable temperature or is the person able to safely adjust
- the water temperature? Are there scald guards installed throughout the home if needed?
- Is the home wheelchair accessible to all areas if needed?
- Is the telephone programmable if needed and a list of all programmed numbers by the phone?
- Is the person familiar with any necessary restrictions about using the stove or microwave oven and are accommodations planned?
- Are there smoke detectors and fire extinguishers and does the person know how to use them?
- Can the person secure his or her valuables to the extent desired?

FINANCIAL

- What help if any does the person need to take care of the day-to-day financial matters, e.g. ATM cards, charge cards, cashing checks at the bank.
- Does the person need help in preparing or following a budget that matches income expenses?
- Does the person need help with paying of the bills, e.g. rent, medical etc.?
- What checks and balances are in place to protect the person's financial resources?
- What would happen if the person sharing their home and expenses leaves?
- What would happen if an increase in the person's income causelloss of Section 8, but did not cover expenses?
- Does the person need assistance if there is a change in income or loss of employment?

OMMUNICATION

- If there are several support people involved, what information needs to be shared and how will it be shared?
- If the person communicates in ways other than verbally, describe what is known about their communication style, e.g. when the person does __we think it means __and should happen. Or use 'Listen To Me' or other tools.

FE CYCLE CHANGES

- If the person is planning to move to a new place, how will they deal with the stress of moving and change?
- What would happen if there were a change in the health (or death) of a parent
- What would happen if the person becomes pregnant? Begin menopause?
- What would happen if the person decides to get married; how would that affect their benefits?
- What would happen there were cultural changes in the person's life.

MOUNT OF SUPPORT HOURS NEEDED

- Identify what the person needs in terms of support hours: day, evening, weekdays, weekends and who will assess. Will there be more support needed at the onset?
- Address any needs related to daily living skills meal planning, shopping, budgeting, personal care.
- Does the person have other family, friends or neighbors who could help out when there is a need
- Always be prepared when the situation changes. Can the person easily access additional support if needed?

RAINING OF PAID SUPPORT

- Get input from family and significant others, as well as the person, to help get support people in working well with the person.
- Look at important key issues for individual. Build individualized job description and training. What role does the person want to play in training their staff?
- Identify how to foster a non-"staff" relationship. Teach about invisible support.
- Teach how to assess and plan for risk following principles listed at the beginning
- Minimize turnover.
 - pay well; build in incentives to meeting outcomes associated with individuals plan e.g. finding a job, having new relationships with others in the community, with the rewarded outcomes changing with each year's plan.
 - Consider video taping essential training/information about the person in the event of turnover.

USE OF SUPPLEMENTAL TOOLS

A variety of supplemental tools are included with Thriving in My Community: A Plan for Independence, Support, and Belonging. The core plan is intended to be used with the supplemental tools that reflect the person's situation and needs. The supplemental tools may be used as presented or adapted. The key is to assure that pertinent information is addressed in the planning process.

PLANNING FOR RISK: A Safety Nets Planning Tool Developed by The Maryland Self Determination Initiative (Appendix II Pages 1-5)

To develop a safety net, it is necessary to think through emergency back up plans related to significant health or safety issues and arrange for them to be in place before a new situation begins. This tool offers a guideline for assessing individual health and safety risk factors and planning safety nets in response to such factors. It addresses health care, emergencies, competencies, environment, financial, communication, life cycle changes, amount of support hours needed, and training of paid support.

For a person who desires increased independence in their living situation, it is useful for someone who knows the person well to review the guidelines with him or her and identify areas where support will be needed. This may happen prior to the planning meeting so that information is available when planning. Or it may be an activity included as part of the plan, provided a mechanism is in place to assure the necessary supports are addressed before the new support situation begins.

This tool is included with permission from the Maryland Self Determination Initiative. Several of its authors participated in the development of Thriving in My Community.

CONFLICT SETTLING TOOLS

Some tension in a meeting may take place. This is not always a bad thing. But some types of tension turn into conflict that takes place out in the open.

This is not a good thing.

When you are helping everyone participate in the planning meeting it is good for you to know some simple conflict settling tips. Here are a few you can use and the times you may want to use them:

"Broken CD Technique": When a person wants to take over the meeting and talk about things the consumer does not want talked about, you can use this tool.
 Repeat what you say, with no changes, over and over until you get the other person's attention.

Speaker: I want to talk about Jim's smoking.

Facilitator: Jim does not want to talk about smoking at his meeting.

Speaker: But Jim shouldn't smoke!

Facilitator: Jim does not want to talk about smoking at his meeting.

"Soft versus Loud": A person may raise his voice to overpower your role as gatekeeper and take over the meeting. Capital letters are shouting and small letters are your response as you get softer and softer until the other person catches on and has to lower his voice to hear you.

Speaker: But JiM WILL GET CANCER IF HE DOESN'T STOP!

Facilitator: I understand you are worried about that. But Jim is an adult and does not want to stop smoking.

You can add broken CD tool if you need to so the message gets across.

Prepared words to say: You may become upset or angry yourself in a conflict with someone else. It is a good idea to know what your limit is and use a tool to end a conflict before it gets out of hand. You can prepare a set of things to say in certain situations, such as:

Angry: I know that you are angry and I do not blame you. But anger is less helpful than talking things out calmly. We are here to talk about Sad: It sounds like you are sad right now. Let's take a time to get ourselves together and then move on.

Unhappy with a decision made by the group: I'm sorry you feel that way. The rest of the group has decided that issue. Let's move on and talk about something else now.

CONFLICT RESOLUTION STYLES

TYPE	FAVORITE PHRASE	BEHAVIOR
COMPETITOR	"Do it my way." "I'm always right."	Tries to win, usually making another lose. In this style, a person defends his/her position or pursues his/her goals without regard to the needs of the other person. Traits: dominates, dictates, seek revenge,
ACCOMMODATOR	"I'm sorry." "You're right, I'm wrong."	Puts aside one's own needs to satisfy the needs of another. Traits: self-sacrificing, appeaser, abdicator, takes the blame.
AVOIDER	"Let's talk about this later." "Forget it."	Refuses to deal with conflict. Traits: withdraws, ignores, isolates.
COMPROMISER	"Let's split the difference." "Let's compromise."	Gives up something in order to get something. Attempts to reach middle ground. Traits: bargains to find compromise.
COLLABORATOR	"Let's find a fair solution for both of us." "We're both right."	Assumes that both people can get their needs met. Traits: harmonizer, problem solver, seeks satisfaction for all.

Active Listening Techniques

1. Finding out more information

Examples

"What are you concerned about?"

"When did this begin?"

"How long have you known each other?"

"Where did you last see your books?"

"How much money do you think it was worth?"

2. Repeating back the information

Examples

"So you would like her to stop giving you dirty looks."

"You're saying that you don't know when you first noticed it happening."

"So you feel like he owes you $9.00."

"So you would still like to be her friend if she wants to be yours."

3. Repeating back the feelings

Examples

"You seem angry about all of this."

"I get the feeling that you are sad about what has taken place."

"You seem frightened about what is going to happen."

"You seem mad about the situation."

4. Encourage the party to speak

Examples

"Please go on."

"Thanks for taking the time to explain this to us. We appreciate your patience."

"Tell me more, I really want to make sure that I understand what you want."
"You are really working hard to resolve this. Thanks."

5. Summarizing what the party says

Examples

"So you are saying that you are concerned about these three things: the money, your friendship, and getting your books back."

"So overall you seem to be saying that you like her, but you don't really want to be friends anymore."

"The things that you want from him are . . . "

"You're saying that the problems you want to talk about here today are . . ."

I-MESSAGE

Speaking So Others Can Listen

When we have strong feelings in a conflict, especially anger, we often use "you messages". These are statements that start with "you" and that accuse, blame, or belittle the other person.

Strong feelings can be expressed without making the conflict worse, by using "I-Messages". In using "I-Messages", the speaker states his or her feelings about the situation without accusing or blaming. "I-Messages" are a good opening to problem solving.

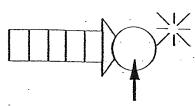

Key Components:

I feel
· .	(use feeling words)
when (describe the behavior non-judgmental)
becau	se
•	(describe what effect the behavior has on you, again non-judgmental)
	vhat I'd like is or Please
	(give a positive outcome of what you would like)

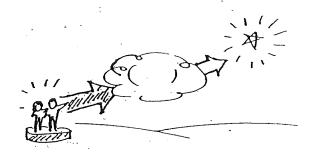

I-Messages are only a non-threatening opening to communication. It is most effective to spend time in advance composing the I-Message that most accurately states the speaker's feelings and needs.

The Dream is an expression of identity and orientation. It gives direction. However, the Dream is not the pathfinder's goal. The goal helps the pathfinder realize and deepen understanding of some of the values expressed in the dream. Identifying your goal for your Path depends on having a vivid, colorful, multisensory image of the results of what effective work toward the dream would look like. The more specific the images of these "results" the better. To describe the sense of success, the pathfinder uses the thinking tool of looking backward. The pathfinder vividly and concretely imagines that success has already happened and describes the changes that have resulted as if they are real. This process of trying on the future can seem awkward at first, but it can be clarifying.

Invite the pathfinder to travel forward in time in order to vividly imagine what they want to create

- Po you think that you could accomplish some important results in a year's time? [If not, try 18 months, 2 years]. When the pathfinder agrees on a time frame, ask the date by which you will have some important results (today plus one or more years). Write the date on the record. Be sure they write the correct future year. The ideal time frame is something that is "just beyond your grasp". If you already have a one year plan, push beyond it into uncertainty but not too far. Just enough to create some tension....
- "Imagine that today is [the future date above]. You are taking time out to reflect on how far you have come since [today's date]. You have done an incredible amount of hard work over the last months. There were ups and downs and

When we dream alone It is only a dream,

But when we dream together

It is the beginning of reality.

-Dom Helder Camera

times when you felt lost, and there is still much to do. But when you look back and see how far you have come since [today's date], you feel a real sense of accomplishment and pride. Your dream is even more clear now because of what you have been able to do."

- "Tell us what has happened. What, specifically, can you point to as the signs of what you have created? What you have done?" For example, if a school team "remembered" that the Grade 10 class planned a trip together and everyone went, push them to remember the details. "Where did you go? Who was on the committee? What was the funniest incident? Who was involved?"
- Keep asking for specific details: "Help us to see, and hear, and smell, and taste, and touch (remember) what you have created/done."
- Let the pathfinder describe whatever accomplishments seem significant. There may be accomplishments in a number of different areas. Record them all.
- If this step yields accomplishments in a variety of different areas, invite the pathfinder to focus on the area of accomplishment that seems most important to explore now. It usually works better to do more than one meeting than it does to explore several paths at the same time.
- Ask the pathfinder to quietly review the record of accomplishment, add anything they want, and then share some feeling words associated with the accomplishments (Add the feeling words to the record).

The facilitator finishes this step by summarizing the pathfinder's sense of success and getting confirmation that the summary is accurate.

Step 6: Charting Action for the Next Few Months

The pathfinder cannot find a way through a complex situation without taking action (Do It) and learning from it (Reflect). The pathfinder needs to chart the main actions for the first few months of their work.

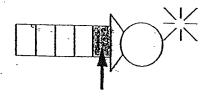

Invite the pathfinder to chart their next three months action:

- Go back and briefly review your image of what you want to create (step 2). Think about the next three months. This should be time enough to take some important action toward what you want to create. What are the most important steps to take in the next three months? (Ask the path-finder to be concrete and specific in describing each step.)
- Check to see that the pathfinder has considered each aspect of the area they have highlighted for focus. The pathfinder may decide that they will not take action on a particular aspect of what they want to create, but they should decide explicitly to wait before taking action.
- Ask the pathfinder to take a minute to check and make sure that the actions they have chosen are consistent with their dream (step 1). If the pathfinder identifies actions that don't uphold the values expressed in the dream, take time to make revisions.
- Ask the pathfinder to highlight the actions that seem possible to do without any additional resources.
- If the pathfinder has selected a longer term goal (say 2 years), they may prefer to chart action for 6 months or a year.
- The facilitator finishes this step by summarizing the pathfinder's ideas about how to build strength and getting confirmation that the summary is accurate.

Step 7: Planning the Next Month's Work

Specifying who will do what by when during the upcoming month clearly focuses the process on action.

Invite the pathfinder to plan the next month:

If you are going to accomplish what you want in the next six months, you will have to take actions now...

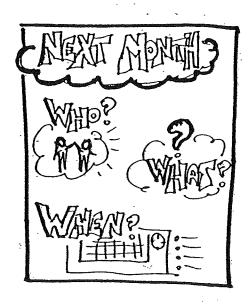

... exactly what will you have to do, and

... by what day in the next month

... who, does what, when

Check to make sure that the pathfinder plans, or schedules a time to plan, for each of the areas they charted for the next three months (step 6).

The facilitator finishes this step by summarizing the pathfinder's plan for the next month and getting confirmation that the summary is accurate.

Step 8: Committing to the First Step

Moving from thinking to action requires commitment to a clear first step. The size of the step matters less than specific pledges to take action by a close and definite time. Breaking the grasp of inertia is critical...

Invite the pathfinder to commit to a specific first step:

creating what you want?

(2) What is the biggest barrier to taking this step?

(Who, specifically, will support you in this step?

How will you enlist their support?

The facilitator finishes this step by summarizing the pathfinder's first step and getting confirmation that the summary is accurate.

In committing to the first step, there are three elements:

Change is inevitable; Growth is optional

Marsha & Jack

identifying a first step

· identifying people to support your first step

checking for "blocks" to action

In many situations, people can identify a first step with ease. However, from lifelong habits, they might neglect to begin their journey with a new essential step — asking for support. Thus, ensure that no one takes their first step on the new journey alone.

The extent of support may be simple – but the new habit is vital. It could be as simple as asking a colleague to phone at noon and ask if you have made your "first step" call yet. In effect, give them "permission", an invitation to bug you. Giving permission to someone to be involved is a very important kind of invitation to add to your new repertoire.

In other instances, people may seem to be blocked from a first step. This is vital information and must be treated delicately. It is a good practice to talk about blocks with every group because we all encounter them from time to time. However, if the pathfinders are genuinely struggling with "first step" kinds of issues, chances are it is a deeper issue and it should be teased out. A good question:

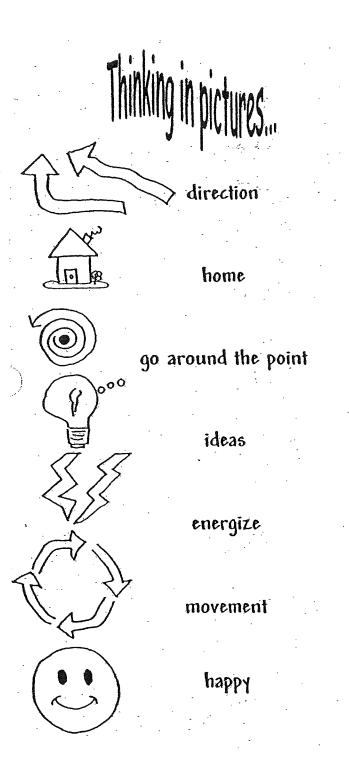

- (2) Is there anything blocking?
- (2) Is there anything that isn't on the Path that needs to be there? Is there anything missing?

One possibility that explains "stalls" is that people got into the process and suddenly realized that success is achievable, if they are willing to make a commitment and work hard. This can be very unnerving since it means they actually must decide if they are willing to make an adequate commitment. Some people choose not to proceed, but the process makes this a conscious choice and so it can be difficult to face.

Alternatively, there may well be an underlying unresolved issue which has been ignored, avoided, or simply forgotten—until now. In some instances, that can be sorted out on the spot. In others, it may well be that until that issue is resolved, the whole Path process is put on hold. Some might think this is a terrible waste, but if the process does nothing but strip away the layers to reveal a central underlying issue, this could be enormously helpful—if people choose to work with it and through it.

Listen to Me Communicate

This part of the workbook is designed to support people who do not use words to talk, or who have difficulty in communicating with words. This section is also useful for people who do use words to talk but are difficult to understand and as a way of recording how we communicate with people who have difficulty in understanding what we say.

The heading what is happening describes the circumstances that seem to affect what the person does. For example, it could be the place, the people around, or the activity that affect 'someone's behavior. The headings and (person's name) does describes what the person does in terms that are clear to a reader who has not seen it and would still recognize it. For people where it is something hard to describe (e.g., a facial expression), a picture or even a video recording may be preferred. The heading we think it means describes the meaning that people think is present. It is not uncommon for there to be more than one meaning for a single behavior. Where this is the case, all of the meanings should be listed. The heading and we should describes what those who provide support are to do in response to what the person is saying with their behavior. The responses under this heading give a careful reviewer a great deal of insight into how the person is perceived and supported.
